

- H.S. war experiences: The Battle of the Bulge
- The 2000 elections: Dr. Wm. Pierce's commentary
- The present, horrible conditions in unfree Germany

GANPAC BRIEF

*The newsletter for politically astute Americans
by Hans Schmidt*

ISSN 1062-3868

Volume 19, Issue 1

A question: Would the United States have experienced such an election fiasco (with only negative ramifications for the country,) if Gore had picked a Christian instead of a Jew as his running mate?

The BRD, "the most free state that has ever existed on German soil."

The sentence above can often be found in publications of the BRD, the Bundesrepublik Deutschland, namely, the German vassal state of the Jewish-ruled United States of America. Lest someone disputes, from the start, my designation of the United States as such, please note the following two items from the Washington Jewish Week of September 21st, 2000:

U.S. pressures Austria on restitution

U.S. officials pressed Austria to use a planned $150 million fund to make payments to all Austrian Holocaust survivors whose assets were looted by the Nazis. During Sept. 15 talks in Washington, Austrian negotiators said the fund should be used to pay only those survivors whose valuable apartment leases were plundered.

Iran said to look to U.S. Jews for help on sanctions

by Tom Tugend
Jewish Telegraphic Agency

LOS ANGELES — Some of the 10 Iranian Jews sentenced to jail terms for spying for Israel may be freed and others may eral congregants said they doubted Motamed was able to speak freely about conditions in Iran.

During his visit, Motamed was reunited with his mother and four sisters, all of whom live in Los has been successful in regaining controls over Jewish schools, Motamed said, and there are hopes that property confiscated from the Jewish community and individuals will eventually be restored.

Motamed also

Would a nation like Iran, certainly no friend of Israel, try to get in better graces in the U.S. by using the Jews as intermediaries if the latter did not have power and influence that, by virtue of their small numbers and alien beliefs, does not belong to them? Would the United States Government use the immense power and prestige it has all over the world only in behalf of Jewish aims, demands and grievances if it were not for the fact that the Jews have assumed control over this nation?

With Germany being under the suzerainty of the United States, this means that Germany is also under Jewish control. Here I'll present just a couple of prime examples of proof how this Jewish power in and over Germany translates itself:

Continued on page 2

Continued from page 1

Most of you will agree with me that November 9th, 1989, the day of the fall of the Berlin Wall, when the criminal (allied) border that had divided Germany for 28 years finally was breached, was a day of tremendous joy and exhilaration for people all over the world, but especially for the Germans. To this day there is no doubt in my mind that this date should have been made a major holiday in the Fatherland. But this was not allowed to happen. The Oberjuden there and here prohibited the Germans even to vote on the matter, and now, just a decade later, I can report that nary a German newspaper even mentioned the breakthrough through the Wall on its 11th anniversary. Instead, on November 9, 2000 a huge Jewish-organized march/demonstration took place through the center of Berlin, and the emphasis was on the Kristallnacht that had occurred on the same day in 1938. Young, patriotic German counter demonstrators who wanted to commemorate the German reunification were stopped by the police even before they could assemble.

The other proof for Jewish control over Germany is the fact that absolutely no major German Government function, such occasions like a festive commemoration, or a major speech by the president, or the enactment of a special law, and the like, takes place where the head of the tiny German Jewish community (allegedly encompassing just one tenth of one percent of the population) does not sit between the German president and the German chancellor (the head of the government.) I have read a speech by this Top German Jew where he addresses the German chancellor by the term "dear colleague." Obviously, Jewish effrontery knows no bounds.

On page 8 of the last Ganpac Brief I mentioned the incredible suppression of patriotic Germans that is currently taking place there. Americans were wondering how come the Germans do not revolt against this terror regime, and others were asking what makes the Germans so docile. My counter question is this: Having seen the open Jewish attempt at manipulating the American electoral process, how come Americans did not take up arms and put an end to this rule by a tiny, criminal minority? The fact is, Americans are still armed, we still have the trappings of free speech (and we have the right to fall back on the First Amendment!) and no foreign power is occupying this nation. Germany, on the other hand, is still held in bondage by the Western victors of 1945, and the worst offenders are the members of the ruling clique of the United States. In other words, it is the United States Army that assists the Jews in keeping the Germans in chains.

Tragically, both patriotic Germans and patriotic Americans have reason to pray that the U.S. ruling clique (both the Oberjuden, as well as the freemasonic WASPs,) and with it the present political system of the United States, has been damaged by the recent election ruckus. It may well be that the old Jews of Palm Beach county, the most heavily Jewish county in the nation, have overplayed their hands, and there is a chance that the damage they have caused is irreparable. In any case, this is what I believe, and it is for this reason why I am reprinting the excellent essay on the matter by Dr. William Pierce of the National Alliance on the next pages. Incidentally, in case you don't know it, Dr. Pierce is the author of the book "The Turner Diaries" that caused so much consternation within the political nomenclature. Dr. Pierce can be reached via P.O.Box 90, Hillsboro, WV 24946

Getting back to Germany: To this day I still do not know exactly how many of the hundreds of Endzeiten/Endspiele books we mailed to individuals in Germany were confiscated by the Secret Police (the Stasi-West, as I call them, with the old Communist Stasi having been the Stasi-East) that was in cahoots with the customs office in Hamburg. But the damage done was great, and could not have been anticipated. (In 20 years we had never any difficulties getting any mail into the hands of German recipients.)

ACHTUNG

An die zuständigen Zolldienststellen!

VuB SV 0214

Schriften mit verfassungswidrigem Inhalt

Bitte zuständige Fachbehörden informieren!

Hauptzollamt Hamburg-St. Annen
-Zollamt Post -

Dammterwall 14, 20354 Hamburg, Germany

TRANSL: ATTENTION all concerned customs offices! According to regulation "VuB SV 0214", this written matter (book) has unconstitutional contents. Please inform the pertinent authorities. (Address of customs offices Hamburg.)

By "pertinent authorities" they mean the Secret Police in the locality where the hapless recipient of this unordered book lives. While being informed by the post office that a book, allegedly mailed C.O.D. (a bare-faced lie!) from the USA was waiting for them, the addressee was also told that now his home may be subject to a search by the Stasi-West. May I suggest that as many of you as possible write to the Hamburg address above and voice your displeasure about these Jewish terror methods.

Before I give you a chance to peruse both Dr. Pierce's essay, as well as the continuation of my war and Waffen-SS story, I would like to make a further comment about the recent elections.

This (mainly) Jew-caused incredible fiasco with hitherto unknown but certainly great and unsolvable repercussions confirmed one of my long-held personal beliefs: It is the unplanned and unintended which often has the greatest impact on our lives, and, ipso facto, on the course of history.

Certainly, people like myself can, to a certain degree, and through their activism, have an influence on political developments. This especially because our adversaries act panicky, stupidly and often without reason, as can be seen by the reaction of the German vassal system to my first German book (the second, much more "dangerous" one will be finished soon.) Undoubtedly the "Verbot" and confiscations, while financially hurting us currently, will eventually translate into a greater than anticipated demand for Endzeiten, a demand that will be satisfied no matter what devious means we have to use to get the books into the hands of German readers.

There is also no question that, for instance, the Oberjuden with their clearly set goals, their immense wealth, plus their lack of moral constraints and relentless activism, continuously interfere into the affairs of mankind. They do this determinately through group planning, i.e., conspiracy.

American Dissident Voices Broadcast of November 18, 2000

Lordy, Lordy! Payback Time Is Here
by Dr. William Pierce

Hello!

As you certainly must know, if you have listened to a few of my broadcasts, I'm not much of a democrat by nature, and I regard the present political system in the United States as a disaster; it's a system in which we count the votes of millions of media-controlled lemmings to determine who our legislators will be and who the head of state will be, and everyone pretends that it's the "will of the people" which rules. The concept of "the will of the people" is questionable even under the best of conditions, where one has a reasonably homogeneous group of people with a high degree of commonality of interests, but in the multicultural chaos of the United States today it is meaningless; it is an illusion which serves only to deceive and confuse.

But it's easy enough to understand how this illusion is useful to the men who really run the country, the men who pull the strings. It's useful, because when the voters become unhappy with the way things are going or the way the system is working they have only themselves to blame. The stringpullers are safely behind the scenes. There's no king to blame things on, no dictator, no oligarchs – or at least, no visible oligarchs. The only thing the people see is the media circus, with the commentators maintaining the suspense: Will the voters of New York go for Hillary or for Rick? Will the voters of Florida go for Al or for George W? As if it made a lot of difference!

Whether it concerns the manipulation of the gold price, or the rise and fall of the stock market, or even the elevation of absolute junk into a valuable form of art, the hands of the Jews can be clearly seen. But the best example of both Jewish planning, as explained in Dr. Pierce's essay, as well as the expression of the spontaneous Jewish activism arising from their extremely strong, inborn herd instinct, as noticeable in the stupid actions of the Palm Beach County Jews, both together resulting in unanticipated and not hoped for consequences, is the split that has now rendered the American body politic paralyzed for some time to come.

This development is good for all people who are against the overbearing power of the Jews. And, ironically, the Jews themselves caused it. All American and European patriots together could not have accomplished this result, after all, it is not us who are masters over the media. We do not know what all our tomorrows will bring. But I am certain that more such unanticipated (and unplanned) situations will arise from which we can and will gain strength. In the meantime, however, we will have to fight on for truth, for justice and true liberty just as we have done in the past. And you will see, victory shall be ours!

Even before the current voting fiasco it did not matter much for us who won the election. But now that the great hullabaloo has occurred, and Bush was declared the winner in Florida, the chances for a race war are greater than ever. Thanks to the old, senile Jews of Palm Beach County.

The report titled "The worst atrocity of WW2", pg. 2 in the November Ganpac Brief, and originally from the Deckert Dispatch, was in its reprinted form first published in The Barnes Review, 130 3rd Street, Washington DC, 20003

Continued from November 2000 Ganpac Brief

H.S. experiences in World War II.

The Battle of the Bulge,

Dec. 16th, 1944 to mid-Jan. 1945.

Before I continue with the B.o.B. story, I would like to make an additional commentary about the movie "Private Ryan": an insight into the matter that only recently came to me.

Some of you may recall that after viewing the film, I wrote a letter to the director, Steven Spielberg, expressing some criticism about his handling of the German side of the battle. This letter was published in the Ganpac Brief of January 1999. Unfortunately, Spielberg never answered it.

Regarding the scenes of the movie most written about by the American media, namely, the carnage at its very beginning, allegedly depicting the American attack on Omaha beach, I was noncommittal, writing merely that I was unable to comment because I had not been there. But something about these scenes bothered me ever since I saw and wrote about "Private Ryan," and I now believe that I have the answer:

Well, of course, it does make a big difference to many of the voters. There are hundreds of thousands of Bush supporters, mostly the more upright and traditional Americans, who are horrified and frightened by the prospect of having a sidekick of Bill Clinton in the White House and continuing the Clinton era for another four years. And there are the assorted bolsheviks, Hollywood trendies, welfare recipients, dykes, kikes, and the rest of the Clinton Coalition, who see Bush as the willing tool of fascist corporate bosses eager to grind the working class — and more important, the heroic, liberal champions of the working class — under their iron heels. The stringpullers, of course, are not really worried, because they know that either candidate will do what he is told to do. They will have to use somewhat different strategies depending upon which candidate wins, but no one is even permitted to become a serious candidate unless the stringpullers are certain beforehand that he will take orders.

You might conclude from what I've just said that the whole democratic process is so tightly controlled by the stringpullers that it is completely meaningless and should be of no interest to us. Well, although that is substantially true, it is not completely true. Although the stringpullers, the people who control the media, usually are able to make the electoral process go the way they want, nothing in life is absolutely certain. People miscalculate things. People make errors of judgment. Even very clever people sometimes trip themselves up by trying to be too clever. We can see an example of that in the recent presidential election.

Stringpullers like close elections, because that gives them a greater advantage. If one candidate is far ahead of the other in the polls — if he is beating his rival by ten to one — he doesn't really have to promise anyone anything. He knows that he'll win and he doesn't need to beg anyone for support. Theoretically, he could even rebel against the stringpullers and tell them to go to hell. That, in fact, is the Jews' worst nightmare. When a really popular leader arises in any country, a true man of the people, then the Jews have no leverage at all, and they usually find themselves in big trouble.

Their survival depends upon playing a balancing game, upon keeping the population of a country sufficiently divided against itself so that the Jews have the balance of power and through their money and their media control can push an election either way. Don't be confused in this regard by the fact that the little Jews, with their natural bolshevik tendencies, usually favor the Democrat by four or five or six to one. They aren't the stringpullers. It's the big Jews, the media bosses and the money men, who really control the candidates, and their aim always is to keep things sufficiently divided that they control both candidates, not just the Democrat.

Balancing the candidates is not their only stratagem for controlling a democracy, of course. They also aim to divide the people in a very fundamental way, to divide the people culturally and biologically. That's one of the reasons they favor Third World immigration and multiculturalism. That's why they're always pushing "diversity." Although a diverse population may be more difficult to control in one sense — that is, it may be more difficult to keep a diverse population orderly and moving in the same direction — it is far less likely to combine against them. It is far less likely to combine behind a single candidate.

When you read my war story you will notice that although I was with an elite unit, and even though I took part in three major campaigns in but six months, and my wounds prove that I was there, my soldierly "non-combat" reminiscences far surpass those of the days when I, or in our case, "we," had been in direct and close combat. And even on such horrible days when the losses on both sides were considerable (January 4th, January 12th, and February 18th, 1945, and the street battles in Hainfeld come to mind,) there was not one day when body parts were constantly flying around due to heavy enemy action (and direct hits,) and when almost everybody acted with determination and like a hero, as is depicted in Spielberg's film.

Just look at the real newsreels of D-Day: Landing crafts are nearing the beach, and most, but not all, are obviously coming under German fire. Some sink, with many of the heavily laden GIs drowning as a result. Those American (and British and Canadian) soldiers finally having ground underneath their feet are, as a rule, widely dispersed, seeking cover, and are seemingly assembling at a leisurely pace before reconnoitering the cliffs above them, contemplating how to best get up there, where the German guns are located. Here and there one sees GIs fall, and then lie still, obviously they are either dead or badly wounded. But no scene justifies the incessant carnage Spielberg has depicted, where the viewers allegedly see "the war as it really was". To put it bluntly: I believe that few soldiers really had to experience what Spielberg depicted at the landing on the beach. If such incessant carnage had occurred, then few of the GIs would afterwards still be of sound mind, and they would therefore be unusable for further combat. Even the best soldiers can only take so much horror before going crazy.

Spielberg also did not show who was manning the German machine guns nests atop the cliffs, and the artillery batteries further to the rear: In most cases old men and young boys. To the best of my knowledge there was not one first-rate unit guarding the Normandy beaches. Only such strongholds as Cherbourg, Le Havre, Brest and Calais were better defended (that's why the Allies did not land there; the failed Dieppe raid was still on everybody's mind.)

Having gotten this off my chest, I shall now continue with my Battle of the Bulge story. Remember that the following events took place in the Northern tier of this German offensive, and in the last couple of weeks of December 1944.

They also strive to control the democratic process in depth, not just at the presidential level. Candidates typically come up through the system over a period of time. A presidential candidate typically has been a governor or a senator or a vice president before he becomes a presidential candidate. The stringpullers have been able to test him and evaluate him over a period of time, to compromise and corrupt him, to be sure that he will take orders and will not surprise them or embarrass them.

But balancing the candidates, keeping the elections reasonably close, is a part of their strategy of control, and they work at it just as they work at increasing the heterogeneity — the "diversity" — of the electorate and at making sure that no honest man gets very far into the system. But, as I noted, sometimes they outsmart themselves. In the recent presidential election they kept Bush and Gore so close that we got the indecisive and really rather embarrassing result we have now. The media were taking polls every day during the last few weeks before the election and announcing breathlessly, "Gore is ahead by one point," but then they would balance this by saying that they had a poll which showed that the people didn't trust Gore as much as they trusted Bush. And the next day they would announce, "Now Bush has pulled ahead by a point." When Bush got three or four points ahead, then a story about a long — ago drunk driving charge was given a big play to bring him back down closer to Gore. And so it went, right up to election day.

And then we got the sort of result we have now, with the people in both major parties convinced that the other side is trying to steal the election. We have Jesse Jackson in Florida with his traveling circus, organizing demonstrations. During the past ten days we have had the Jews in the Gore camp demanding recounts in several Florida counties, and we have had the Bush people in court demanding an end to the recounts. The media have been playing it up as proof that the system still works in America. In Pakistan or Brazil under similar circumstances the people would be rioting in the streets, but here we go by the rules. Isn't that wonderful!

As a matter of fact, some of the demonstrations in Florida by Gore supporters this past week have looked a lot like riots to me. More encouraging than that, however, is a huge amount of grassroots reaction to the election, as manifested on radio talk shows and in Internet discussion groups. Paranoia is rampant. Never before have there been so many claims and such widespread belief in election fraud. While the media bosses are telling us that the election proves the system works, more people than I've ever seen before are saying that this election proves the system is crooked. The really wonderful thing about this is that no matter whether Gore or Bush ends up in the White House, half the country will be convinced that the other side stole the election.

That conviction will be good for the country, but it is not a conviction which will be helpful to the stringpullers. For their racket to continue being successful, they need for the public to believe in the system and support the system. When most of the people no longer believe in the system, we will have a civil war. Civil wars are nasty things, destructive things, and most normal, healthy people abhor them. But a civil war is coming, and the sooner the better, because as the country becomes darker and more "diverse," the other side becomes stronger. The longer we wait, the bloodier and more destructive the civil war will be, and the less chance we will have of winning it. That's why I say that the suspicion and discontent caused by the recent election are good for America and for our people, and they were not the consequences intended by the stringpullers.

A German s.I.G.33 150mm Infantry howitzer. This particular cannon, still in existence today, and now on a pedestal in the village of Niederwampach near Bastogne, played a rôle in my own personal life on January 12th, 1945, the very day of the last engagement of the Leibstandarte in the West, and also when the Red Army began its final assault on the Reich.

Instead of being a gunner with 150mm howitzers, I had ended up being a messenger for higher German headquarters located at the village of Meyerode near St. Vith. It deserves mention that St. Vith is but a few miles from Meyerode, and it was taken by our troops only shortly before Christmas evening. Once, a few days before that date, I was supposed to take orders to a unit fighting near Vielsalm, and the most direct route would have been through St. Vith. Not knowing that this small city was still in American hands, I got dangerously close to the enemy lines. From that trip I do remember inspecting an abandoned very heavy American cannon (probably of a 210mm caliber,) and in the snow I found ammunition for a Colt 45, the largest pistol bullets I had ever seen.

Perhaps my most interesting trip occurred when I was sent to the northernmost units of the 6th SS Panzer Army to make contact with a regiment of the 12th SS Panzerdivision Hitler-Jugend (the very division that after the invasion delayed the British advance at Caen so herocially.) The "HJ" division, as we called it for short, had bogged down badly near Krinkelt, and did not reach its set targets at and near the famed Elsenborn ridge. For myself and the driver assigned to me, it was impossible to take the direct route to the ridge since the main east-west road just north of Meyerode was clogged by regiments of Hitler's Leibstandarte and many American POWs on the march into German captivity. We had no choice but to make our way back to Blankenheim, then north to Schleiden, and from there west to the village of Schönesseiffen, from where a road was leading to the famed Kaiser barracks (an old Prussian training ground) at the Elsenborn ridge.

I've received a lot of mail on this subject during the past week, and probably a letter from one Florida voter, Bob, sums them up. Bob writes, and I quote: "I have always been a voter, but this is the last time. I have been raped enough by these scoundrels in Washington. To hell with their elections. Let's start taking our country back -- now. I'm sick and tired of it all, and I won't take any more."

On the other side we can see a mixture of gloating and whining in Jewish publications. A Jewish Telegraphic Agency dispatch of November 8, for example, is headed "Florida Jews may hold key to the presidency." The first line of the JTA dispatch reads: "In the end the selection of the next president of the United States came down in many ways to voters in heavily Jewish South Florida."

Actually, Jews make up only five per cent of the population of Florida, but they are very heavily concentrated in a few Florida counties, and it is from those counties that most of the complaints about the election have come. After Bush won the popular vote in the state by only about 7,000 ballots, a recount was demanded. But in the most heavily Jewish counties -- Dade, Broward, and Palm Beach -- one recount wasn't enough. They have been demanding recount after recount, and Bush's lead keeps dwindling. Jews in Palm Beach County, which is the most Jewish county in the United States, complained that they were confused by the ballot, and they want not only another recount but a chance to vote all over again.

Finally, there are the absentee ballots, all of which should have been counted by yesterday. An especially high percentage of Florida's absentee ballots come from Jews in Israel. Jews have demanded and received the privilege of being able to live in Israel as Israeli citizens and still retain all the rights of U.S. citizenship, such as being able to vote in U.S. elections. Virtually all of these Jewish dual-citizenship votes are for Gore. The nicest possible outcome of the election would be for a few thousand Israelis to be the deciding element in putting Gore in the White House. Although Bush himself wouldn't dare to complain about that, plenty of Republican voters will be talking about it. As I said, the important thing about this election is not so much who won it, but that it has served to shake the faith of many voters in the system.

One other good outcome of this election is the state of gridlock we can look forward to in the Congress, which is now much more evenly divided between the two parties. The less the Congress is able to agree on anything, the fewer new laws with which they will be able to saddle the American public.

One issue which certainly will be debated in the new Congress is the issue of reparations to Blacks for slavery. Just over a month ago, in my broadcast of October 14, I pointed out that this issue, which has been sitting on the back burner for a long time, would begin heating up quickly, and it has. I made a wild guess in my October 14 broadcast that Blacks might ask for as much as a trillion dollars in reparations from Whites, which would come to a little over $20,000 per White household in the United States.

Well, since first scenting the possibility of squeezing some reparations money out of Whitey, Sambo has become more ambitious. Now spokesmen for the Black reparations movement are talking about five trillion dollars,

At and near Blankenheim the situation looked quite different from what I had seen a few days or a week earlier: The weather had cleared, and the roads leading to and from this small town were littered with the shells of burned-out or otherwise destroyed German gasoline trucks, and other types of military vehicles, the result of American air superiority. And in the snow-covered fields one could see the remnants of numerous V-1 flying bombs that had crashed before reaching their targets behind the enemy lines. While my driver raced along the road, I had to be on the lookout for the low-flying Jabos (Jagdbomber: fighter-bomber) that made life hell for everyone who had to venture away from the immediate battle zone. (In order to avoid that trigger-happy American pilots killed their own troops, there was an area, a forbidden red zone, very close to the front where German soldiers were relatively safe from air attacks.)

Schleiden, an old medieval city with narrow streets, had recently been bombed, and it was difficult to maneuver through the ruins. While asking an MP post for the best way to get out of the town I had to pass by a group of Russian POWs repairing some damage near the railroad station. Seeing that I was alone, one of the Russians ventured to say, in broken German, "soon you will be either dead or prisoner, and I shall be free." What could I say or do? I drudged on. Neither I nor the poor fellow realized then that most Soviet soldiers who had fallen into German hands as POWs ended their lives in the Bolshevik GULAG.

The village of Schöneseeffen west of Schleiden was in an area under constant American artillery bombardment. We had hardly entered the village, and were near the cemetery, when a salvo of American shells began detonating about us. I took a flying leap over the low redstone wall surrounding the cemetery, and fell atop one of the graves. A minute later, when the danger had passed, I looked up and discovered right next to me the body of an older, immaculately dressed staff sergeant of the German Marine Infanterie, who must have been killed much earlier, for his body was already frozen stiff. How someone of the German Marines, recognizable by the gold-colored braids of his uniform, got to this God-forsaken place in the Eifel mountains remained a puzzle forever. I could not help but look at this dead soldier who rested so peacefully in a cemetery, and I wondered about the family he had left behind.

Soon the driver and I were on our way through the village, and on a narrow road, freshly covered by snow, leading toward the west. I or more than $100,000 per White household, and that's a wonderful thing. I suppose that a lot of timid, brainwashed, middle-class Whites might be willing to cough up $20,000 in order to avoid being denounced as "racists," but when somebody comes around to collect $100,000 from each of them instead, he's going to catch a 12 gauge rifled slug in the gut coming right through the door. That's another good reason for getting the guns away from all of those White crackers now.

Really, if there's any group of people in America who deserve to suffer, it's the White middle-class. It's the people who have been warned for decades about where this country is headed, but who were too shortsighted, too timid, and above all too greedy, too selfish, to do anything about it. During the 1960s, when Blacks were rioting and burning our cities, middle-class Whites refused to take a strong stand against them because that would disrupt the country even more and would be bad for business; instead they tried to appease the Blacks with all sorts of new civil rights laws and other government programs. They tried to buy them off. The Whites just wanted to continue indulging themselves; they didn't want to do anything that might require a bit of austerity in return for the long-term improvement of the country.

In the 1970s, when the real push was on to racially integrate the country through forced busing and forced housing and forced employment laws, and many White working-class people were demonstrating in the streets against this forced racial integration, the comfortable middle class, which was not being as adversely affected as the blue-collar class, refused to become involved. The White lawyers and doctors and accountants and professors and engineers and small businessmen just looked the other way and kept on stuffing their faces. Their kids weren't being bused to Black schools; their employment wasn't being threatened by affirmative action. They certainly weren't going to jeopardize their own comfort and security and respectability, just because of what was happening to working-class White kids and working-class White parents.

Of course, many middle-class Whites were concerned about the degenerative trends which were all too obvious in America during the 1960s and 1970s. They just weren't concerned enough to do anything. Their solution was just to vote Republican and keep making as much money as possible, so that they could insulate themselves and their own immediate families from what was happening around them, and to hell with everyone else. And so we had the Reagan era, and the White middle class thought that their strategy of compromise and appeasement and selfishness had worked.

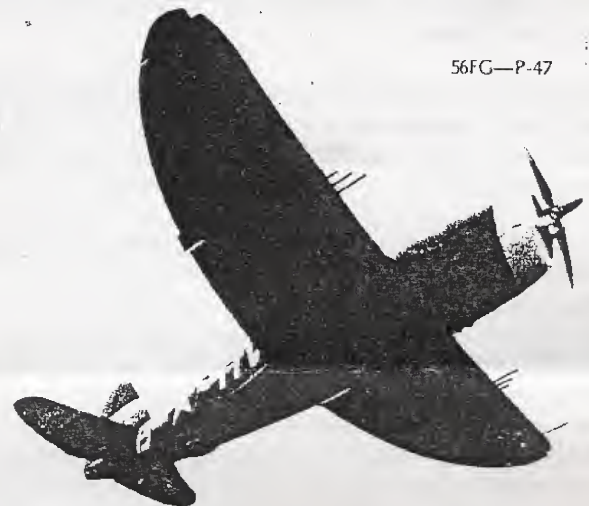

Well, of course, it hadn't worked. Such strategies never work in the long run. People who will not fight eventually will be eaten by people who will fight. A community whose members are so self-centered that they will work only for their own personal benefit and not for the common good eventually will be destroyed by its enemies.

And our enemies have been at work, day and night. They opened our borders to the subhumanity of the Third World and began building up their numbers. They encouraged feminism and began reducing our numbers by persuading our women that careers were more important than families. They infiltrated and took over our educational establishment and taught our children that they should be ashamed of their own race, that their own history and traditions weren't worth learning about.

remember speaking to two soldiers in foxholes besides the road, and asking them whether they had seen either SS soldiers passing by, or had contact with the enemy. Their answer was negative. But only a few hundred feet further down the road we suddenly came under fire from the Americans while we were looking at a large caliber self-propelled gun of the U.S. Army standing in a well-camouflaged clearing. Around the vehicle, and, in my opinion, much too close for the gun to act as a safe shelter from German fire, I counted the corpses of about a dozen GIs, obviously infantrymen. It struck me how much they were like us: their frozen young faces still showing the emotions of their last minutes of life.

Due to the increasing American fire, (both from small arms and artillery pieces like anti-tank guns,) my driver and I were forced to make a hasty retreat. Obviously, this was no way to get to the Elsenborn ridge. Coming by the two soldiers again, I chastized them for not telling us that they were in fact the foremost German post. Their laconic answer was simple:

"You didn't ask us."

56FG—P-47

Halfway back to Schönesseiffen, less than a mile away, we thought we came under attack by an American Jabo, a P47 "Thunderbolt". The plane came out of the sun all guns firing, and we could do nothing but lie helplessly in a ditch next to the road as bullets hit the snow quite close to us. When the plane flew past us, he was so low that we were able to see the face of the pilot. After several strafings the P47 made one more low pass and left westward toward his home base. We continued, unscathed, on our way to Schönesseiffen, only to discover, well camouflaged but recognizable, a battery of 20mm (four barrel) German anti-aircraft guns somewhat off the road, the real target of the American plane.

And the children of the White middle class learned instead that doing drugs and putting safety pins through their noses and wearing baseball caps backward and listening to Black rappers is cool. And the daughters of the White middle class began bedding down with Blacks and becoming pregnant with mongrel babies, and their parents didn't like it, but they tolerated it, as long as they could hang onto their money and their comfort and their lifestyle. And eventually the enemies of our people were strong enough to launch the Clinton era. But the members of the White middle class were still comfortable, and so they tolerated the Clinton era too, with all of its treason and degeneracy. They tolerated the total Judaization of their government. They tolerated the Clinton government's bombing of Belgrade to force Serbia into line with the New World Order. They didn't like it, but they tolerated it.

And so now the fruits of all that toleration are almost ready to be harvested — and it's about time. It's about time for the White middle class to have to deal with the problem of 30 million Blacks who believe they are entitled to reparations and who very shortly will be clamoring for $100,000 from every White family. They believe they're entitled to at least five trillion dollars in reparations from us, because we tolerated the Jewish media pumping expectations of that sort into them during the past 50 years. We tolerated all of the Hollywood films and the television propaganda telling them about how they were persecuted and mistreated by us for 400 years and that they really are equal to us, and the only thing which has kept them from achieving what we have achieved is White racism. We knew it wasn't true — we knew it was Jewish lies — but we tolerated that propaganda rather than risk being called "racists" for contradicting it or "anti-Semites" for pointing out who the liars were.

And we also proved to 30 million Blacks that we're a bunch of wimps who won't fight for our people or for our own rights. They believe that the White man owes them five trillion dollars and that he doesn't have the guts or the gumption to stop them from taking it.

It'll be an interesting fight. And you know what? I'll be cheering for the folks demanding reparations. I think it's about time for the soft, White middle class to begin facing reality and to experience a bit of trauma and privation. Perhaps it'll help a few of them learn how to survive in the jungle from which they have been too far removed for too long.

The text above is based on a broadcast of the American Dissident Voices radio program sponsored by National Vanguard Books. It is distributed by e-mail each Saturday to subscribers of ADVlist.

To subscribe to ADVlist send an e-mail message to:
ADVlist-on@NatVan.com (The subject and body of the message don't matter.)

Back in the village we decided to call it a day, and join some Army infantry soldiers for a meal of thick soup and dark bread. Later, as we stood on the east side of the farm house, the side away from the danger of getting hit by an American artillery shell, we watched numerous V1 missiles flying rather low over the village, coming out of the already dark sky in the east toward targets in the west.

Suddenly, the odd sounding lawnmower noise of the engine of one of the V1s, whose flight path led direct over us stopped, and all we could hear was the swooshing sound of the wind gliding over the wings of the missile. We had no doubt that the thing was going to crash very close to where we were standing, and we knew that these new wonder weapons carried such a heavy load of explosive that it could blow all of us to smithereens. The five or six of us standing around jumped, as fast as we could, and one on top of each other, down into the outside stairs leading to the farmhouse cellar, just making it, when we heard the V1 crash into a house less than a hundred feet away. Then --- nothing.

What we did not know then was the fact that such a missile had to arm itself while flying. Since it must have been launched only a few minutes before, the fuse for the explosive had obviously not been charged. For safety's sake we waited for a couple of minutes, and then we sounded to the wreckage. The missile had hit the side of a farm house constructed of field stone, made a large whole in the wall, but fell, shattered in many pieces, into the courtyard. The only thing seemingly undamaged was a huge ball of about 2½ feet diameter in size that was held together with many metal straps. When I inspected it and gave it a kick, one of the other soldiers got all excited, telling everybody that this was the explosive charge. Well, in the darkness we never discovered the real cordite charge or whatever explosive was used, but decades after the war I found out that the apparatus I had kicked contained the missile's gyroscope.

(It must have been in the seventies when I visited Schöneiseffen again. It was then when I discovered that the people in the farm house never knew that their home had been hit by a V1, they had ascribed the hole to artillery damage.)

To be continued in the March 2001 Ganpac Brief.

GANPAC is, after 18 years of existence, still the only organization politically defending the interests of the 60 million Americans who have declared themselves "German-Americans", this nation's largest ethnic group. It is GANPAC's aim to fight and expose the never ending defamation of all things German by the U.S. media, for instance with the phony "Holocaust" claims; to inform the American public and the politicians of the great contributions by the German-Americans and Germans to the growth and well-being of this nation, and to help build a better society for all. The GANPAC BRIEF has appeared monthly since 1983. Donation /subscription rates are $50 per annum ($35 for students and Social Security recipients - U.S. and Canada addresses only.) All overseas addresses (air mail) $60 per annum. Back issues are available ($4.00 per issue). Mail $6.00 for list (1984 -1996 only).

©German-American National Public Affairs Committee, P.O.Box 11124, Pensacola, FL 32524 USA